How Jefferson County inmate escaped jail transport

By MARK CAMPBELL and COLLIN OVERTON
Courier staff writers

A Jefferson County Sheriff's Department transport vehicle was northbound on U.S. 421 to the Decatur County Jail Wednesday when a 113-pound female inmate — handcuffed and in leg restraints — forced her way through a window and escaped the transport officer who was slowing the vehicle after spotting the inmate trying to go through the window.

Erica Nicole Stidham, 36, of Madison, evaded the officer, triggering about an hourlong search by Decatur, Shelby and Jefferson county sheriff's departments, Greensburg Police Department, and Indiana State Police.

Court records show that Wednesday's escape is not the first time Stidham has attempted to evade authorities.

She has resisting-by-fleeing charges in both Jefferson and Scott counties, including a case in Scott County where officers said she attempted to evade capture by swimming across part of Hardy Lake.

"She apparently has the temperament and mindset to resist arrest and flee," said Josh Taylor, Jefferson County chief deputy sheriff. "This is not her first rodeo."

Taylor said Stidham escaped both the transport vehicle and injury about 45 miles into its trip Wednesday, when the deputy driving the vehicle slowed.

"The car started slowing down once she started going out the window," Taylor noted. "There was no failure to perform on the part of the deputy and no disciplinary action is planned."

The incident took place at about 12:10 p.m. Wednesday about four miles South of Greensburg on U.S. 421 at County Road 280 South.

Police quickly established a perimeter around the escape site while the Indiana State Police used their aviation and K-9 units to search for the inmate.

Greensburg Police Department Officer Mitch Tuttle and his K-9, Hercules, located Stidham hiding in an out-building on a property inside the established perimeter about an hour after the search began, and she was taken into custody without issue at 1:38 p.m.

Taylor said Stidham was evaluated at a local hospital for scuffs to her feet and possible hypothermia and then taken to the Decatur County Jail, where she will ultimately face new charges in addition to the charges for which she was already being held.

Taylor said Jefferson County had been holding Stidham on warrants for possession of methamphetamine, possession of a legend drug, possession of a syringe, resisting arrest by fleeing and failure to appear in court. She was being moved to Decatur County because of Jefferson County's jail crowding problem and lack of suitable cells to house certain types of inmates.

CORN MAZE TRADITION ENDS

No 'Trail of Screams' in Milton this year

Low volunteer membership, field's soil make Halloween tradition impractical

By COLLIN OVERTON
Madison Courier staff

A Halloween tradition for residents of the Courierarea has come to an end.

Milton Fire and Rescue Chief Jason Long announced in a Facebook post recently that the department will no longer host its annual Trail of Screams corn maze because of the impracticality of responding to calls, conditions of the field's soil and low volunteer membership.

"This was a hard decision for us but it was for the best," Long announced in the post. "We apologize to all of our loyal customers that came each year. It is just not something we could do anymore."

For eight years, the fire department has hosted the maze in the cornfield next to Station 2 on Volunteer Drive off U.S. 421. Fire volunteers would spend at least two weeks cutting and mowing the paths, placing props and decorations in the maze each weekend evening it was open and removing them from the path hours after it closed, usually as late as 1 a.m., Long said. Each year, they would cut a new pattern in the corn, like the Maltese cross used in countless fire department emblems.

"People don't realize how much work was involved in it," Long said.

A limited number of firefighters and the priority of responding to calls has made it hard on the department to juggle, however. In the event of a call, firefighters had to shuffle customers out of secret emergency shortcuts and temporarily shut the maze down. It happened often, Long said.

"All the firefighters would be out there in the middle of the corn maze, and if we had to go to a wreck or a house fire, you're looking at five to 10 minutes to get everyone out of the corn maze, but then you have to get the customers out too, then shut it down, and then get in the trucks and respond," he said.

Long said membership has dwindled in recent years. The department had 20 to 30 members a decade ago; they now have about 12. When factoring in their shifts, only five or six are around to respond to a call at a time.

"And that's not enough people," Long said. "...We don't have anything to offer people except for you get to help the community, you get a shirt, you get to be part of the department...you can't get people because you have nothing to offer, really, besides that," he said.

Milton Fire and Rescue is not alone in having this problem. A study from the National Volunteer Fire Council found the number of volunteer firefighters in the U.S. decreased by 25 percent from 1983 to 2017. At the same time, emergency calls have tripled in the last 30 years, it said.

The department did, however, get five new recent applicants after a persistent call for new volunteers, Long noted.

Another issue in running the maze was the condition of the corn crop and potential for fires. Years of growing on the same land without rotating have made the stalks brittle, short, thin and potentially flammable, Long said. This year was so dry, he doesn't know if running all the electrical equiment through it would have been safe.

"One year, you could look over the corn and see where you were going because the corn didn't grow high enough," he said.

Last year proved especially frustrating,

Madison boards clear way for two developments

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Report

Action by two Madison boards Wednesday has cleared the way for two housing developments in the downtown area.

The Madison Board of Zoning Appeals approved a project to develop up to seven upscale condos/apartments on the second floor of a former factory building on Jefferson Street while the Plan Commission cleared the way for a project to repurpose the site of a former grocery for three single-family dwellings in the 1000 block of West Main Street by reclassifying the property from retail to residential.

Andy L. Lytle was before the Board of Zoning Appeals asking for a conditional-use permit and parking considerations for a project to develop from five to seven upscale condos or apartments in the former Meyers Manufacturing at 202 Jefferson Street, across the street from the Madison Post Office.

Lytle, who owns and operates Microdome Wireless Networks Inc., which is on the hilltop, said the first floor of the 24,000-square-foot building is being considered for development into an animal hospital while Microdome's owners would develop the second floor into several loft apartments. The two operations would occupy the same building but under different ownership or management.

The structure, built in 1877 as Schofield Woolen Mills and most recently used as an antique mall, sat vacant for about 15 years before Microdome bought the site in September 2009.

"We finally have the opportunity and are in the position to develop this property and excited about it," Lytle told the board.

Lytle said there will be very few exterior changes that have not been already approved and that the exterior would mainly involve renewal.

As part of his request for a conditional use permit, Lytle asked that the city allow residents of the building to use both pull-in parking on Jefferson Street and some spots in the city parking lot at the corner of Jefferson and Second streets — up to a maximum of 14 spaces — to supplement the limited parking on site at the building.

He said Jefferson Street can accommodate about 26 head-in parking spaces in that area and the city lot has 70 spaces, of which about 50 percent are used daily.

"I live a block and a half from that parking lot and there's always plenty of parking in the lot," said Zoning Appeal Board member Nancy Burkhardt. "It's an unused facility as it is."

The board unanimously approved the request — with the caveat that city parking is first-come, first-served — and granted a conditional-use permit for a period of three years. After that, the owner will have to come back before the board to seek an extension.

At the beginning of Wednesday's meeting, Scott

Sullivan evacuates block amid building collapse fears

Indiana

SULLIVAN — A city block containing municipal offices and other workplaces in southwestern Indiana was evacuated amid fears an adjacent building might collapse and affect power lines and a gas main. The City of Sullivan on Thursday lifted the emergency evacuation of the downtown block that contains Sullivan City Hall, Sullivan County Community Corrections, an auto parts store and other businesses. However, it remained unclear when those businesses would re-open. Mayor Clint Lamb said City Hall will re-open Monday. Lamb said an adjacent three-story former law office building experienced some structural degradation Wednesday morning, prompting the evacuation. Lamb said he's working with demolition experts and contractors to weigh options for the failing building. Metal mats were placed over a shallow gas main to protect it from any debris that might fall.

Remains identified as missing Dearborn man

LAWRENCEBURG — State police say skeletal remains found earlier this week in southeastern Indiana have been identified as those of a man who vanished in 2017. The remains were discovered Sunday by someone who was walking through a heavily wooded area near Lawrenceburg, Indiana. Indiana State Police said Wednesday dental records were used to identify the remains as those of Josh Batchelor, who was last seen in May 2017. State police had been investigating the disappearance of Batchelor, who was in his late 30s, and now they're investigating the Dearborn County man's death. Police say that investigators, including forensic anthropologists from the University of Indianapolis, searched Monday and Tuesday in the area where Batchelor's remains were found and discovered additional remains believed to be from Batchelor.

Indiana hospitals report data breach

MERRILLVILLE — A northwestern Indiana hospital system is warning more than 68,000 patients that their personal information, including Social Security numbers and health records, may have been exposed during a data breach. Methodist Hospitals has been mailing letters to patients detailing the steps they can take to safeguard themselves against possible fraud. Methodist, which has campuses in Gary and Merrillville, said it was alerted in June to questionable activity on a staffer's email account and that it learned in August that two employees had fallen victim to an email phishing scam in which an unauthorized user got access to their accounts, the hospital system said in a news release. The hospital system has no proof that patient information was accessed, but officials said they couldn't rule it out. In addition to Social Security numbers and patient health records, the hackers may have accessed names, addresses, dates of birth, driver's license/state ID/passport numbers and credit card information.

Woman gets probation in Delta flight assault

ANN ARBOR — An Indiana woman who had been drinking wine before she attacked a Delta Air Lines crew and federal agents on a Michigan-bound flight has been sentenced to six months of probation. Camille Krueger said she's "just so sorry" for the January 2018 incident aboard an international flight from Germany. The 63-year-old nurse had to be restrained for 90 minutes on the Delta plane after attacking her husband and crew members. Investigators say Krueger of La Porte, Indiana, also head-butted federal officers who removed her from the plane. Federal Magistrate Judge David Grand said the incident appeared to be a combination of "stress and alcohol." He said disturbances can be frightening to other passengers, especially people who don't like to fly.

Appeals court upholds nail-gun conviction

MUNCIE — A state appeals court has upheld an Indiana man's convictions and sentence for holding three people against their will and attacking one of them with a nail gun. Wednesday's 3-0 ruling by the Indiana Court of Appeals rejected the arguments of Robert A. Walton, 59, that some of his convictions should be vacated. A Delaware County jury convicted the Muncie man last year of criminal confinement, battery and other charges. He received a 39-year sentence. Police said Walton and a co-defendant held two women and a man against their will in a Muncie building in August 2016 before Walton attacked one of the women, whom he suspected of working as a police informant, with a nail gun. Nails were fired into her legs, torso and one foot.

Toddler dies in shooting after finding mom's gun

MOORESVILLE — Police in central Indiana say a toddler found his mother's unsecured gun while she was out of the room and accidentally shot himself to death. The Morgan County Sheriff's Department said the shooting occurred Wednesday morning at a home outside Mooresville. The department identified the child as Anthony Jones, 2, of Indianapolis. Deputies say his mother, Stephanie Jones, 26, told them she had gone to the bathroom while her son was watching television, heard a gunshot and ran back to find him lying on the floor with a fatal head injury. The child was dead at the scene. The boy's father wasn't home at the time. The family was housesitting for relatives. The death remains under investigation.

Kentucky

Man hit sister with pan, killed dad with crossbow

LOUISVILLE — Police say a Kentucky man hit his sister with a frying pan and then fatally shot his father with a crossbow. News outlets report 23-year-old Gerald Beavers III was taken into custody hours after the Thursday attack. Police say they responded to a Louisville home that afternoon and found Beavers' father dead. The sister was found with serious wounds. It's unclear who called police. It's also unclear what motivated the attack, what charges the man could face and whether he has a lawyer who can speak for him.

Ex-worker sentenced for Mammoth Cave theft

BOWLING GREEN — A former longtime employee at Mammoth Cave National Park in Kentucky has been sentenced to two years in federal prison for skimming money from the park's recreational fees. A statement from the U.S. Attorney's office in Louisville said former employee Leslie Lewis took nearly $170,000 of funds collected from the public "by manipulating the fee collection system and the employees she supervised." Prosecutors say Lewis created false deposit documents and used a duplicate check scheme to hide the theft. U.S. Attorney Russell Coleman said Lewis "stole from one of the most iconic public spaces in our Commonwealth." U.S. Chief Judge Greg Stivers in Paducah also ruled that Lewis, 61, must repay the stolen funds and spend three years on supervised release after her sentence is completed.

Pearl Harbor attack sailor to be buried

HAZARD — The remains of a sailor killed at Pearl Harbor have been identified as those of a Kentucky soldier. WYMT-TV reported Seaman Second Class Hubert Hall, 20, was aboard the USS Oklahoma with 428 crewmen Dec. 7, 1941, when it was struck by Japanese torpedoes and capsized. Military officials say remains of the crew were recovered over the next several years and buried. The military first tried to identify the remains in 1947, and 35 soldiers were identified. The station says Hall was identified in 2015 through DNA analysis, dental records and circumstantial evidence. The remains are now being sent to his family. He's scheduled to be buried next year at the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific, where his name had been recorded on the Walls of the Missing.

School officials plead not guilty to bribery

FRANKFORT — Two Kentucky school administrators pleaded not guilty to charges they improperly handled sexual abuse allegations against a teacher. Franklin County Superintendent Mark Kopp and Bondurant Middle School Principal Whitney Allison entered pleas Tuesday. Kopp is charged with trying to bribe a public servant. Allison is charged with failure to report child neglect or abuse. A grand jury indicted them last month during the investigation of Todd Joseph Smith, who's charged with sexually abusing children younger than 16. The Franklin Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney has said Kopp's charge involves comments he made to a deputy during the investigation. Kopp's lawyers contend he never offered the deputy anything. Kopp, who remains in his position, wouldn't comment on Allison's status.

AG wins restitution for stiffed weddings

FRANKFORT — The Kentucky Attorney General's Office said the owner of a now-closed wedding venue must pay over $27,000 in restitution to nine couples who had their weddings canceled or didn't receive promised services. The attorney general's office sued last year to hold Gabriella Farm owner Nicolle Thompson liable for the losses. The couples were from Bullitt, Jefferson and Meade counties. Thompson was ordered by a Hardin County Circuit Court judge to pay an additional $20,000 in civil penalties. A statement from the attorney general's office said Thompson took payments from couples and then ceased communications with them. Attorney General Andy Beshear said the couples were "were conned out of not only their money, but their joyful wedding day memories."

Boy with cancer gets 2000 birthday cards

LOUISVILLE — A Kentucky boy who asked for cards for his 10th birthday has gotten more than 2,000 of them so far. News outlets report Carter Matthew Willett was 10 Thursday and has several weeks left in his current bout of chemotherapy. Carter was diagnosed last year with Ewing's sarcoma, a rare form of cancer. A Facebook page following his story said Carter has had a bump on his head since he was 4 months old. It said the bump really started to bother Carter last year and it was removed around Thanksgiving. It said the family learned days later that the bump had been a cancerous tumor. Recent photos posted on the page show the family receiving dozens of letters and packages, with Carter even posing with some mail carriers.

Ex-champion Wildcat Ed Beck dies at 83

LEXINGTON — Ed Beck, a fierce rebounder for Kentucky's 1958 NCAA championship team nicknamed the "Fiddlin' Five," has died. He was 83. The school said Beck died Wednesday in Sun City, Arizona. A two-year captain for coach Adolph Rupp, Beck grabbed 11.6 boards per game with 5.6 points on the school's fourth title squad. Beck was named Southeastern Conference Defensive Player of the Year that season. Beck's leadership in 1958 followed a personal loss with the off-season death of his first wife, Billie, from Hodgkin's disease. He turned down an offer from the NBA's New York Knicks after graduation to enter the ministry and served there for more than 50 years.

Vigo County jail build cost $56.27M; construction bid recs OKd

By HOWARD GRENINGER
(Terre Haute) Tribune-Star

Construction cost for a new Vigo County Jail will be $56,276,080.

The Vigo County Board of Commissioners unanimously voted Tuesday to accept bid recommendations from Garmong Construction Services.

"Each low bidder's proposal has been reviewed and compared to the scope of work. Each contractor is considered the lowest, responsive and responsible bid," said Mike Peterson, senior project manager for Garmong, after reading off bid recommendations in 13 categories.

Commissioner Brendan Kearns said he considers the final design the best for the dollar.

"It is no secret that I have had concerns about this project from Day 1, but when we got to the last step that resulted in where we are right now, (Commissioners) Brad (Anderson) and Judy (Anderson) both, there was a lot of stress and angst over reducing the cost, and I was part of that, too," Kearns said. "But you guys have been involved in this from day one.

"We sat in this room for many hours trying to get the cost down to make it where it needed to be within that budget. Everybody can talk about how the delay led to increased costs, but I don't think that is unique to this project. I think that is tied to everything. The more you wait, the more time goes on, that will cost more. Nothing goes down nowadays," Kearns said.

"Being a new guy, and working with Brad and Judy, I will say with efficacy and confidence that they did work very hard on making sure we got the best facility for the dollar," Kearns said.

Commissioner Judy Anderson said architects DLZ made many changes to design drawings as the project changed.

"I feel confident that with all the due diligence that we have had and the help we have had, that this is the best process for the project. I have no problems with it," she said.

Commissioner President Brad Anderson said the construction cost "is within the bounds."After the meeting, Brad Anderson said the bids came in a little higher than expected, and some cuts made include reducing the number of sally ports (secure, controlled entryways) to three down from five.

"As far as the jail (section) itself, we did not make any changes," he said. "It was mostly in the sheriff's department side and with some business things that we think we can do, such as with phone," Brad Anderson. The board also chose alternates under categories including electrical panels and alarm systems for quality assurance, he added.

The next step is for the county to issue a bond to cover construction and financing costs. Anderson said once a bond issue is done, commissioners may look at an opportunity to add solar panels to help offset water heating costs. However, such panels are not in the current cost or design.

"We still may be able to look at that, maybe add some solar things," he said. "We have room at this site for two new pods. That was one of the reason on cost as we had to make it big enough to expand without a problem with size of mechanical rooms and the kitchen, so if we do add pods, it won't hurt us any."

"A lot of local companies got the bids on this," Anderson added.

Fulton County hikes income tax 0.3% to free other funds for jail

By WESLEY DEHNE
Rochester Sentinel

The Fulton County Council on Tuesday decided to enact an income tax hike to finance a new jail.

The county's current income tax rate of 2.38% will increase by 0.3% under the measure. The revenue from the tax hike will go toward construction of the new jail and operating costs.

Of that rate increase, a little less than half will be allocated to a public safety answering point, or PSAP, expenditure. Revenues generated on that portion of the rate increase may be used to fund the 911 dispatch center, and therefore free up money from the county's general fund to fund the jail project.

The remaining portion of the rate increase will be allocated to public safety and be distributed to the county, City of Rochester and the towns of Akron, Fulton and Kewanna.

An estimated $572,160 in additional revenue will be generated each year. The public safety portion will raise an estimated additional $410,584 for the county, $204,736 for Rochester, $18,375 for Akron, $16,413 for Kewanna and $3,793 for Fulton.

A handful of people attended the council's meeting Tuesday to voice opposition and ask questions.

"Does Fulton County truly have the ability to take on this burden with some of the numbers that you're seeing out of your taxpayers?" Aaron Bolinger asked.

He noted that from April 2010 to July 2018 the county's population declined by 750 people, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. He noted the percentage of children receiving free or reduced lunch at Rochester School Corp. is at 50.6% and 33.9% at Tippecanoe Valley School Corp. He also cited statistics covering job loss, property tax comparisons and assessed valuation.

"Every little bit, even if it's .1 or .5 or .3 of a tax percent, that is more time that those who are already struggling are going to have to pay into this," Bolinger said. "We have to trust the sheriff that he knows what the needs of the county are, but are we really able to pay for all of this?"

He also voiced concern about the county purchasing prime commercial property along U.S. 31 for the new jail.

"There's never going to be a factory that is going to sit out there," he said, adding the property has been removed from the tax rolls. "There's going to be something that just sucks up taxpayer money now."

The property – southwest of the city limits between Indiana 14 and U.S. 31 – was purchased from Rochester Concrete Products Inc. The county agreed to pay $20,000 per acre on the 15.73-acre property. The total price, including closing costs, was $315,757.

"I'm just wondering, if we've known we've had an issue with the current jail for several years, have we escrowed any money back for this?" Troy Beehler questioned. "It seems to me if you've known this is a problem that maybe we would have put something back for it instead of just raising taxes."

Others in attendance were critical of the county raising the tax rate before seeking bids on the project.

Tony Vie, architect of Elevatus Architecture, said his firm is finishing drawings of the new jail and the county's construction management firm, Garmong Construction Services, has provided a conservative cost estimate of the cost to build.

"We're very confident in that cost estimate," he said, adding the project will be put out to bid on Nov. 1. Interested contractors would then have four weeks to submit their proposals.

Councilwoman Lorie Hurst said the decision to enact the tax increase comes from more than two years of studies and consultation.

"We haven't just jumped to conclusions on it. We've studied it very well," she said, adding income tax versus property tax was the best route to generate additional revenue.

"It's not just landowners who will contribute to this need, it's all of the county," she said.

Bicknell does away with police department

Vincennes Sun-Commercial

BICKNELL — City council members Tuesday approved a 2020 spending plan that Mayor Thomas Estabrook said is already realizing the savings from largely doing away with its police department.

Estabrook said the city's General Fund next year will total $982,000, down from more than $1.1 million.

"So our General Fund is quite a bit less," he said. "And a lot of that has to do with this inter-local agreement."

The county council in September approved the agreement with Bicknell, bringing an end to a months-long effort to see the city fall under the sheriff's department's protection.

The agreement — which essentially eliminates the Bicknell Police Department save one daytime code enforcement officer — previously was approved by the city council and county commissioners.

There was some public opposition to the agreement, but Estabrook and the city council held fast to the position it was the best option for Bicknell in terms of law enforcement.

The city had for years, Estabrook said, been plagued with trouble attracting quality officers and keeping them due to relatively low pay and lack of health benefits.

In return for police protection, the city will annually pay $326,000 to the county for four additional deputies.

Bicknell also eliminated its dispatchers; all 911 and even utility emergency numbers now go to Central Dispatch.

Old Order Amish families are moving to Fayette County

By BOB HANSEN
Connersville News-Examiner

COLUMBIA TOWNSHIP — Some of the earliest European settlers in Fayette County came west 200 years ago for religious reasons, land and better opportunity.

A new group of settlers is coming for those same reasons, with 14 families having moved in since summer 2018. These are Old Order Amish. They have settled in southwestern Fayette County, looking for an opportunity to continue their way of life. One tradition is to avoid publication of their names and photos. This article is based on an interview with one, but we are not publishing his name. He is part of a group organizing an event to help build a two-room schoolhouse for their children who are now going to school in a workshop on one of their farms.

This group of Amish families has moved to the area from the vicinity of Berne, in Adams County, where their ancestors began settling in the 1850s. Many came there directly from Switzerland and Germany.

They are here because land near Berne became too expensive, the spokesman said. Traditionally, Amish families farm on small plots of land, using horses instead of tractors, and traveling mostly by horse-drawn buggies. They do not use electricity and some other modern conveniences, with the exception that some have solar-powered electric fences, the spokesman said.

Many also are involved in other kinds of work. The man we spoke with does construction and had just finished building a new house.

The Old Order Amish maintain their own language of Swiss and High German, the spokesman said. When the children get ready go to school, they learn English.

The language gives the Old Order Amish a certain degree of difference from other Amish people, such as many who have settled in Wayne County over the past 22 years. Most Wayne County families moved west from Lancaster, Pennsylvania area, where farmland became too costly and crowded.

The Old Order Amish who live here drive open-top buggies with no backs on the seats. Even in the cold of winter, they do not put tops on their vehicles. Most in the Wayne County community drive "top-on" buggies.

There also are many similarities. They rotate church services from house to house, meeting for organized worship every other Sunday. They observe a day of no work every Sabbath. Their religious and cultural practices are ruled by local bishops. Currently, the Old Order bishop for Fayette County is living near Berne, but the community will eventually get its own bishop.

Census affects government funding to local communities

By MAGEN KRITSCH
Daily Journal of Johnson County

In a few months, residents all across the United States will get a postcard asking them to answer questions for an official population count that will be used for the next 10 years to make important decisions regarding state and federal funding.

Questions on the once-a-decade questionnaire will include asking residents to count the number of people in their homes and whether they rent or own their house.

Residents' answers to those questions and the overall population counts of local communities can affect which roads get fixed in the county, what businesses may open up, how many restaurants serve alcohol, how much money schools get from the state and federal government, where police patrol the most and how fire stations are staffed.

Local officials are encouraging county residents to fill out the information for the 2020 Census to make sure their household is counted so cities and towns can get an accurate count of how many people live in their communities and as much federal funding as they can to fix roads, staff schools and be eligible for grants.

"So much of what we do is tied to these population numbers," said Dale Davis, Greenwood's planning director.

The 2020 Census is expected to begin in March when residents get a flyer in the mail asking them to participate. Participants can answer questions on paper, by phone or, for the first time ever, online.

The Census is a population count conducted once every 10 years that is mandated by the United States Constitution. At stake, nationally, is $675 billion that is distributed using Census numbers, said Tim Swarens, spokesperson for the United States Census.

"That money helps pays for hospitals, schools, roads and highways," Swarens said. "It is used in a variety of ways that has a direct impact on communities."

Census numbers also determine how many seats each state will have in the U.S. House of Representatives, and are used to draw state and legislative districts, according to the United States Census website.

Businesses study population counts to decide where to open their establishments, Swarens said. Theoretically, restaurants and shops coveted by county residents could use numbers from the 2020 Census to decide whether to open in local communities.

Millions of dollars are at stake locally, as population numbers gleaned from the Census are used in nearly every decision local leaders make about their cities and towns, Franklin Mayor Steve Barnett said.

"Just your whole budget is affected by the population," he said.

City officials in both Franklin and Greenwood will look at the population counts to decide where city upgrades could be made to drainage and other city infrastructure, Davis and Barnett said.

Greenwood will also look at the Census data to make staffing decisions for the police and fire departments, as it will give city officials a snapshot of who is moving to Greenwood and what services they might need, Davis said.

Data is also used to decide how much money local schools get, both federally and at the state level, he said.

"Getting an accurate count is interwoven as a municipality," Davis said.

Federal and state money is also given to local communities based on what the populations are. For example, the Community Block Grant, federal funding given to communities to address housing and other issues, uses Census numbers when doling out money to grant recipients.

Data collected in the Census also affects how many federal dollars are allocated when planning and implementing road projects, said Luke Mastin, county highway director.

"It is important we get good and solid Census data to be sure we get as much federal funding on road projects as we can," he said.

State distribution of the state's wheel and gas taxes and grants that the county could receive is partially decided on population counts. That is millions of dollars at stake that is used to plan repairs on existing roads and build new roads in the county, Mastin said.

"That is why it is important we get accurate census counts," he said. "It affects the amount of road maintenance and construction we can do for the next decade."

WORK FOR THE CENSUS

The Census is hiring for a range of positions including including recruiting assistants, office operations supervisors, clerks, census field supervisors and census takers, by completing a single application online.

People with language skills, including Spanish, are needed. Opportunities are available throughout Indiana.

Applicants are placed in an applicant pool for 2020 Census field positions and are considered as positions become available. Applications will remain active and updateable throughout the 2020 Census recruiting and hiring period.

For more information, contact 1-855-JOB-2020 (1-855-562-2020) and select option three. Applicants may also contact the Federal Relay Service at 1-800-877-8339. For more information, please visit the 2020 Census Jobs page at 2020census.gov/jobs and USAjobs.gov.

BE COUNTED

The 2020 Census will start in March, when residents across the country receive a flyer encouraging them to participate.

About 95 percent of American households will receive the flyer and the flyer will encourage them to fill out the questions online. Some homes will also receive paper questionnaires.

If the Census is not filled out online, residents will get a reminder letter and questionnaire in later March and April.

In late April, an additional follow-up will be made by mail. If that goes unanswered, a Census taker will attempt to count the number of people in the household by going door to door.

Taylor said that on any given day, Jefferson County probably has 20 to 30 inmates housed in facilities in other counties.

He said Stidham's escape still is under investigation in Decatur County but that she now likely faces escape and resisting law enforcement charges there in connection with Wednesday's incident.

Stidham was serving time for a Sept. 13 incident in which she tried to evade Madison Police officers who encountered her while attempting to arrest a man on warrants from Jefferson and Scott counties.

Senior Patrolman Aaron Watson wrote in his affidavit that he and Senior Patrolman Zackery Nicholson had received word that Jonathan Hunt, the wanted man, was mowing the lawn behind a residence at 816 East First St. When pulling into the alley behind the house, Watson did not see Hunt in the yard, but saw a brown-haired woman bolt from the driver's side of a van parked in front of him.

Watson recognized the woman as Stidham and shouted for her to stop, even calling her by name, but she refused and started running toward a fenced-in area, the affidavit said. The chase almost ended there when she got stuck trying to get through the door, but somehow managed to get through to the fenced area and then into the kitchen of the house through another door.

Watson was close behind and tried to kick the door open, but was unsuccessful. He radioed to other units to go to the front of the house, since it was the only other way out.

Nicholson, who had just arrived at the scene, saw Watson trying to get through the back door and ran to the front entrance as Hunt and Stidham were on their way out. Nicholson gave them multiple commands to lie on the ground, but neither complied, and he drew his taser. Hunt started moving toward the alley, prompting Nicholson to deploy the taser, and Stidham ran back inside the residence.

One of the prongs didn't embed, so it took several commands and another taser deployment for Nicholson to incapacitate Hunt enough to put him in handcuffs.

By that time, two other officers had arrived to assist. One stayed with Hunt as others joined the searched of the house for Stidham. They found her in a cellar with the entrance covered by boards, and arrested her without further incident, Watson said in his affidavit.

She managed to elude Scott County sheriff's deputies in that county in late July.

Scott County Sheriff Jerry Goodin said officers were sent to a residence on North Windrift Road near Hardy Lake to arrest Stidham on an outstanding warrant. When they showed up, he said, she jumped into the lake, swam across a narrow channel and got away before they could catch up.

"They saw her, she took off running through a field, and there's no way they could have caught up with her," Goodin said.

Warrants listed on the Scott County Sheriff's Office website show Stidham wanted for possession of methamphetamine, theft, resisting law enforcement and escape.

According to Scott County affidavits, she violated her probation by traveling outside of her schedule and testing positive for meth, attempted to shoplift from the Dollar General in Scottsburg, got caught with meth while trying to shoplift at the Dollar General in Austin and shoplifted at the Scottsburg Walmart, concealing multiple items under her child's car seat.

Her recent history of drugs, theft and evading law enforcement in Jefferson County shows two different arrests in 2019 on charges including possession of meth, multiple legend drugs without a prescription and a syringe in addition to resisting law enforcement.

• Madison boards

Baldwin announced that he was taking over as chairman of the Board of Zoning Appeals since former chairman Bob Courtney has assumed duties as Madison's mayor.

At a meeting earlier Wednesday, the Plan Commission heard a request by the owner of a former grocery site at 1029 West Main St. to use that property to build three two-story, shotgun-style homes that would have access to both Main Street and an alley behind the property.

The property is the site of a former IGA grocery built in 1940 that closed decades ago and in later years was used for a storage facility before the contents were liquidated and the building demolished last year. The new owners, Anthony Hammock and Bernard Johnson Jr., hope to develop the .34-acre tract into three single-family dwellings in the form of shotgun houses with full basements that also serve as a garage.

Lisa Hammock, speaking before the commission, said the proposal calls for 20-foot-wide structures that run well back into the lot and include a single parking space per home just off Main Street between the sidewalk and the homes. The floor plan basically calls for a kitchen and master bedroom on the top floor and two bedrooms and a parking area in the basement.

The commission granted approval to reclassify the property from retail to residential and clear the way for the project.

when the maze had to stay closed because of rain every weekend and the department didn't make a cent. Unlike departments in Oldham County, Kentucky, Milton Fire and Rescue doesn't have a taxing base, he explained. All revenue comes from the fish fries they host several times a year, which helps cover the $1,000 to $1,500 spent on running the corn maze each year.

But the hassle of juggling the maze with responding to calls, the department's main priority, remains the biggest reason for shutting down the attraction.

"There was one year that we had a fatal wreck up in Bedford and we responded to it, and it was right when the corn maze opened — I don't even know if we had one customer in there yet — and we were up there for three-and-a-half hours," Long said. "When we got back, there was a line, there were people waiting three-and-a-half hours for us to get back just to do it... it was fun, but it's just not the business we need to be in as a fire department — fish fries are what we're going to stick to."

Long said most of the props, costumes, lights and fog machines were given to the Deputy, Indiana, Volunteer Fire Department for its annual Haunted Hayride, which they hosted last Saturday night.

A comeback for the Trail of Screams would only be possible if the funding and volunteer force were sufficient, he said. Families from as far from Cincinnati and Fort Wayne drove down to go through the maze, as well as hundreds of local families.

"It sucks for that, just because those families, it's something they can do and and it's a memory for them, it's just that it's something we're not able to do anymore," Long said.

SELLERSBURG — If Madison volleyball had any hopes of pulling an upset in its sectional opener on Thursday, Silver Creek put an end to those thoughts quickly.

The defending regional champions made short work of Madison's young squad, rolling to a three-set 25-10, 25-11, 25-16 victory on the Dragons' home floor.

Madison coach Camille Crim knew that her team was in for a tough night against the talented Dragons and the match played out much the same .

"We're really young and our kids fought until the end. They never gave up regardless of the score," Crim said. "I'm really proud of our team. I know it stinks to lose, but if you have to lose to somebody, at least it's to the reigning sectional champ and somebody who is probably going to go pretty far again this

Pacers swept by North Decatur

By ROB LAFARY

VERSAILLES — Switzerland County gave its best effort against a 20-win North Decatur team on Thursday night but in the end the Chargers proved to be too much, defeating the Pacers 3-0 in the opening round of the IHSAA Class 2A Sectional 45 volleyball tournament at South Ripley.

The Pacers hung tough early in each of the three sets but North Decatur pieced together a string of points to push away. Despite the loss, Switzerland head coach Kim Rosen said the season-ending loss reflected improved effort and improved play from her team.

"We've struggled with the peaks and valleys thing with the swings in middle of games and tonight we couldn't have asked for anything more," Rosen said. "We saw them play more consistent tonight so that was refreshing. Unfortunately too little too late but still loved to see the improvement."

Switzerland County trailed just 10-8 early in set one but the Chargers extended the lead out to 15-9 before the Pacers responded with a point to cut the deficit to 15-10. North Decatur though responded, getting two more successful serves from Olivia Bohman and a kill by Erika Kramer to go up 17-10 before the advantage stretched out even more.

North Decatur eventually took the set 25-16 but the Swiss responded and came out swinging in the second set, getting out to a quick 5-4 lead. Howanother Charger run put an end to any momentum. Bohman again picked up a kill, kick-starting a mini-run that led to a 9-6 lead and another run soon after pushed the lead to 17-9 before the Pacers ended the drought with a point and then Hannah Hayes's kill cut the lead to 17-11.

In response, North used two Bohman kills and four serves from Erika Kramer to build the lead up to 22-11. A block by Ally Furnish paired with another Pacer point stopped the bleeding temporarily but the Chargers finished the set strong, eventually for a 25-14 win. The small spurts by North Decatur became the story of the match and an obstacle Switzerland County never could overcome.

"Once you get down four or five points I think it can go either way," Rosen said. "We played Jac-Cen-Del earlier in the season and got down 14-7 and came back and won. We've had moments like that this year but tonight wasn't one of them. It doesn't always go your way."

North Decatur (21-9) took control of the third set and led 18-10. Despite the deficit, Switzerland County did its best to hang tough. The Pacers trailed 20-13 after a Jaden Harrell serve led to a score but the Chargers eventually slammed the door shut and controlled again, using a 5-2 spurt to clinch the match on a 25-15 victory.

For the Pacers, the third set didn't go as planned but all four seniors — Katelynne Whiteford, Furnish, Mikailah Peterson and Jacey Peelman — all got a chance to see the floor one final time. Rosen said the foursome has been special to the Switzerland County volleyball program and will be missed.

Shawe can't match Rock Creek in sweep

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

ELIZABETH — Rock Creek pulled away for easy wins in all three sets to eliminate Shawe 3-0 in the opening round of the Class A Volleyball Sectional 61 at South Central High School on Thursday.

The Lions, who have been ranked in the top 10 all season, jumped out to big leads in each of the first two sets then pulled away late in the clincher to post the 25-11, 25-7, 25-19 win.

"We knew it was going to be tough. We played them in the second match of the season at our place and they've got a good, sound, fundamental volleyball team," Shawe coach Tim Torrance said. "They've got one really good hitter and several accompanying hitters who all know how to get the job done. How they hit is how we need to and that's something that we need to improve on and make strides on."

Shawe played even with Rock Creek early in the first set at 4-4 but in a blink of an eye, the Lions jumped ahead 14-4 after Ligia Williams served her team to nine-straight points, four via the ace. Rock Creek never looked back in rolling to the 14-point win.

The second set followed nearly the same pattern as the opener. Shawe actually led 3-2 early, but another long run — this one 11-straight points behind the serving of Jenna Rogers, staked Rock Creek to a 17-4 lead and the Lions were never threatened.

It was only in the third set where the match got interesting. Not willing to back down, the Hilltoppers battled back-and-forth early, leading 12-11 at one point, before yet another long serving run — this one 10-straight points by Bailey Brown — put the

Reich ready to roll dice again when Colts, Texans square off

By MICHAEL MAROT
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Indianapolis Colts coach Frank Reich prefers taking the aggressive approach.

His coaching staff understands it. His players respect it. And opponents know they must be prepared to confront it.

Sometimes, the fourth-down gambles pay off — as they did earlier this season at Tennessee and Kansas City. Sometimes, they backfire. Either way, though, Reich acknowledges he's willing to take the same risky call against Houston on Sunday as he did in last year's home overtime loss to the Texans.

"Those decisions always come down to what's best for the team in the moment," Reich said. "A lot of things go into those decisions, but primarily like you said, it's a belief in the players. Yes, we think situationally it calls for it, but it really stems from a belief that we'll get it done."

Nobody has been better playing the odds this season than Reich.

Indy has converted all seven fourth-down attempts, the gutsiest call coming from its 35-yard line with less than 2½ minutes to go in a two-point game at Tennessee.

And when things don't go right, such as the incompletion on fourth-and-4 from the Indy 43 with 24 seconds left in overtime against Houston, Reich still seems to hit the jackpot. While the Colts lost that game, he won over the locker room with a season-changing moment.

Indy has won 13 of its 19 games since then including twice at Houston late last season.

"Frank made the call he felt was best for his team and that's in my opinion what Frank does well," coach Bill O'Brien said after the Texans converted a key fourth down at Kansas City last week. "He's an aggressive coach. You know sometimes you have to do in your mind what's best for your team from your preparation and where you are in the game. Those are things that Frank does very well."

It keeps everyone on their toes — and the bye week may only give Reich more time to contemplate how to play it Sunday.

"I think that mentality is what carries beyond that one play," he said. "I think that's an example of what happened last year. Yeah, that was one play, but it was the belief and conviction in our players I think that carries longer than the one play."

CATCHING ON

Four-time Pro Bowler T.Y. Hilton has thrived against the Texans over the years.

In 15 games, the Colts receiver has 78 receptions, 1,506 yards and nine touchdowns. Late last season, with an ankle injury, he still managed to haul in 11 catches for 260 yards in the games at Houston.

The Texans know just tough Hilton can be.

"He's fast, great route runner, can come in and out of his breaks, understands how to attack leverage, has great experience," O'Brien said. "He's seen all of the coverages there are, so he knows how to get open. He's got good chemistry with Jacoby and I think he's targeted quite a bit. It's a challenge."

HOLDING THE LINE

The Colts went from worst in sacks allowed in 2017 to first last season. Now Houston is trying to follow a similar blueprint.

While Jacoby Brissett has gone down just six times, tied for the second fewest in the league, the Texans have made a dramatic turnaround after giving up 18 sacks during the first four weeks.

Lions ahead 22-12.

Unlike the first two sets, Shawe stayed in the hunt, eventually pulling within 23-18 after a strong run before Rock Creek finished out the win.

Rock Creek (23-7) dominated at the net with Williams raining 16 kills down on the Hilltoppers and Leah Thompson adding six kills. But Shawe's biggest issue came in serve reception. The Hilltoppers had nine serve receive errors in the first set alone and Lion servers collected 18 kills in the match, led by Brown, who had eight aces and was 17-for-18 overall.

"We struggled with serve receive. We just didn't move enough. When you try to play the ball flat-footed, nothing good comes of it," Torrance said. "It's always a learning experience and I hope that if they take something from this game, it will help them in the future."

Rogers finished the match 19-of-21 serving with four aces while Ligia Williams was 14-of-15 serving with four aces. Lajoy Williams was 11-for-11 serving with two aces.

Phoebe Grote led Shawe's serving efforts by going 9-for-9 while Abigail Hill was 8-of-9 serving, Lina Leatherman was 7-of-8 serving and Lauren Knoebel was 5-for-5 serving. Lina Leatherman, Grace McAllister and Emmaline Leatherman each had two kills.

Rock Creek advances to the semifinals on Saturday morning where it will take on New Washington. South Central and Lanesville will meet in the other semifinal.

Shawe ends the season with a 4-19 record. The Hilltoppers graduate only one senior, McAllister, giving Torrance hope for the future.

"It's sad to lose Grace because she's been with me for four years and I've seen her grow and I've seen her do some positive things and losing her is going to be a big loss," Torrance said. "We didn't have a great amount of success with the junior varsity as far as wins and losses, but we improved mightily with fundamentals. I'm hoping that, with the great class we've got coming in, will really carry us. We had five freshmen that played a lot of points for us and we knew at the beginning we were going to have a lot of growing pains, but I hope that those growing pains will correlate to something better next year."

our four seniors got out there and enjoy those final moments together," Rosen said. "We are really going to miss those four this year. That third set it was nice to get them out there and I know we were down but they put up a fight and it was nice to see that."

North Decatur moves on to Saturday's semifinals to face Southwestern at 11 a.m. The second semifinal will feature South Ripley and Milan after the host Raiders picked up a 3-1 win over South Decatur in the second game on Thursday.

Switzerland County finishes the year at 6-21. Despite losing four seniors, the future is bright for the Pacers who return several underclassmen and look to build upon the strides made in the final week of the season.

"We have a pretty solid junior class and we have a really big sophomore class that is up to six or seven girls," Rosen noted. "We're not going to be hurting too bad next year. We are going to miss our senior girls but things are looking up and we have a good foundation to build upon as we head into next year."

HANOVER ROUNDUP

Hughes scores twice to lead Panthers

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Josh Hughes scored with less than four minutes left in regulation to lift Hanover College men's soccer to a 2-1 win over Rose-Hulman at home on Wednesday.

The two Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference rivals battled through 62 minutes of scoreless soccer before Hughes, a junior from Lafayette, Louisiana, took a cross pass from Fernando Martin and placed it into the net for a 1-0 lead.

The lead didn't last long when an uncredited goal squirted through the Hanover defense during a scrum in the 70th minute.

But Hughes made up for the mistake with his second goal, a bicycle kick off a pass from Evan Redmon.

There were few scoring opportunities for either team in the match with Hanover collecting only seven shots — six on goal — and Rose-Hulman with only six — three on goal. Hanover's Will Bedel stopped two shots by the Fightin' Engineers, who fell to 10-3 overall and 3-1 HCAC with the loss.

Hanover (6-5-1, 3-1 HCAC) visits Bluffton on Saturday.

Women fall at Rose

Rose-Hulman's Maggie Sheerin scored the winning goal in the 103rd minute of the second overtime to beat Hanover 3-2 in women's soccer Wednesday in Terre Haute.

Hanover built a 2-0 lead in the first half thanks to goals by Autumn Bootby in the 17th minute and Maggie Day in the 38th minute, but the Panthers couldn't sustain that advantage

Sheerin got Rose-Hulman on the board just before halftime and Elle Ogden scored in the 68th minute for the Fightin' Engineers to tie the game. After a scoreless first overtime, Sheerin scored the game-winner.

Rose-Hulman held a 14-11 advantage in overall shots, but shots on goal were even at nine each. Amanda Carmosino had six saves in goal for the Panthers.

Hanover, now 6-5-1 overall and 3-1 HCAC, travels to Bluffton on Saturday

Volleyball falls at Transy

Hanover took 21st-ranked Transylvania to four sets before falling 25-16, 25-23, 23-25, 25-21 in HCAC volleyball Wednesday in Lexington, Kentucky.

Adrianne Vance had 14 kills to lead Hanover while Ally Williams had 26 digs. Josie McClara had nine blocks.

Hanover, now 13-8 overall and 2-1 HCAC, travels to Bluffton on Saturday. Transy is now 19-4, 4-0 HCAC.

With only two seniors on the roster, Madison has spent the season building for the future. And like all young teams, the Cubs have looked good at times this season and overmatched at others.

Thursday's match was the latter. With a three-hitter attack, pin-point passing and effective serving, Silver Creek wasted little time in building big leads in all three sets and needed just over an hour to finish off the win.

Silver Creek (19-12) built a 17-6 lead in the opening set and led by as much as 20-8 before coasting to the 15-point win. The second set was nearly identical with the Dragons pushing ahead 10-1 early, leading 23-8 and claiming the 25-11 win.

Madison again fell down early in the third set but the Cubs rallied to take a 13-12 lead on a Chloe Preocanin kill and trailed only 19-15 late. But the Dragons finally wrestled control and scored six of the final seven points to end the match.

"We're young, but we're tough. We've got a lot of fight in us," Crim said. "I'm really excited moving forward that we get to start fresh next year."

Madison graduates two seniors, Kailyn Hostetler and Paige Young, but has a young roster coming back that should improve on the Cubs' 8-20 record.

"They're both resilient. They have both rolled with the punches with a new coach halfway through (their careers) and we've made a lot of changes with them," Crim said of her two seniors. "But they have really done everything we have asked them to do and worked to show us what we needed. And they led their team in some of the stats on the court. We're going to miss them for sure.

"A lot of the (young players) will play year-around and we'll have a lot of stuff going on to build that going forward," Crim added. "They're a good solid core group."

Silver Creek will take on North Harrison in the semifinals on Saturday morning. Salem and Christian Academy of Indiana square off in the other semifinal.

Each Zoe's Carousel label says, "Tag, you're it! This book is from Zoe's Carousel, a book-sharing tradition created by Miss Duffy in honor of Zoe Falkenberg. It is now in your hands because someone else loved it and wanted you to read it. Please enjoy and then 'tag' someone new!"

The spirit of a 9-year-old girl and her books has traveled across the country, most recently from Washington to Madison through the help of a few now-local residents and advocates.

Jeff and Susan Studds recently moved to Madison and chose to participate in Zoe's Carousel, a book-sharing tradition that grew out of the story of Zoe Falkenberg and her first-grade teacher.

Zoe Falkenberg was a bright and friendly 9-year-old girl from Maryland who was traveling on a plane with her parents and 3-year-old sister when the plane was hijacked and flown into the Pentagon on Sept. 11, 2001.

Zoe grew up loving to read, going to school and enjoying her family. She was known for her determination, intelligence and ambition as a top student at University Park Elementary School in Maryland. She was active in Girl Scouts, ballet, swim team and appeared in the school's production of "Brigadoon" and a local production of "The King and I."

After her death, many of Zoe's books were given to one of her favorite teachers, Miss Duffy, who then began to share the books with her own students so every student could borrow, read or keep books at home. The tradition has continued ever since. When Miss Duffy retired in 2018, she decided to get books into the hands of as many children as possible.

Zoe's Carousel was officially founded in 2018 as a way to circulate books across the country in Zoe's honor. Many of these books, which include a label on the inside of the book that explains Zoe's Carousel, can be found in little free libraries across the United States so they can be borrowed, read, kept or forwarded on to others.

Each Zoe's Carousel label says, "Tag, you're it! This book is from Zoe's Carousel, a book-sharing tradition created by Miss Duffy in honor of Zoe Falkenberg. It is now in your hands because someone else loved it and wanted you to read it. Please enjoy and then 'tag' someone new!" The label then encourages readers to post a picture of the book on social media using #zoescarousel and on the Zoe's Carousel Facebook page.

"These are some of Zoe's books that were collected after she passed; some of them hers and some of them were donated by people in the community," said Jeff Studds. "They put this together as kind of a memorial...Miss Duffy retired in 2018 and she decided to go ahead and instead of keeping the books and what-not in the school, to go ahead and spread the love. If you want books, she will send you a box of books and you can put them wherever you want to."

Encouraged by Zoe's story, Jeff and Susan Studds received a few of Zoe's books to place around Jefferson County. The first spot is at the free library outside the Jefferson County Historical Society.

The Studds, who recently moved to Madison, are both Hanover College graduates. They said they chose to begin participating in Zoe's Carousal when they settled here.

"We would like to start with this (free library) that's nearby, but with (Jeff's) work with Rotary, we would love to put some Zoe books at every elementary school in Jefferson County," said Lisa Studds.

The Studds said any book can be turned into a Zoe's Carousel book with a label that can be printed and stuck to the inside of a book. To learn more or to print labels that can used to add more books to Zoe's Carousel, go to juliestrobel.wixsite.com/zoes-carousel

HOW TO PLAY: Each row, column and set of 3-by-3 boxes must contain the numbers 1 through 9 without repetition.

BRIDGE

STEPPING CAREFULLY BETWEEN THE HANDS

Alfred Hitchcock said, "TV is like the invention of indoor plumbing. It didn't change people's habits. It just kept them inside the house."

A bridge declarer is happiest when he can move between his hand and the dummy's without needing to call on an opponent for help.

In today's deal, how should South play in six no-trump after West leads the diamond 10?

As regular readers will know, I strongly approve of North's two-heart response, which showed at least 8 high-card points and five or more hearts. This told South that it was almost certainly a slam deal, which a "two diamonds waiting" response would not have done.

After two more natural bids, South asked for aces, then settled into six no-trump.

Declarer could see 10 top tricks: four spades, four diamonds and two clubs. There are two more winners available in hearts. It all looks too easy. However, the spade-suit blockage necessitates some care.

As seems to be so often the case, the key play comes immediately. South must win trick one in his hand, retaining dummy's diamond jack as a key door (entry).

Then he should unblock (cash) his two top spades and continue with the heart jack. If East plays low, declarer leads his second heart and has his 12 winners.

Yes, declarer can lead the heart jack at trick two, but if East ducks his ace, then South must take his two spade winners.

Adding an appetizer, subtracting a slight

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I live in the Midwest. My husband and I have a good friend who dines with us quite often, usually once or twice a week, as well as on holidays. She is a longtime friend. The problem is this: She never brings anything with her when asked to dinner. She never asks us to her place for a meal. She never offers to buy dinner when we go out, maybe once a year. She never offers to bring carryout. She is fairly close and watches our house when we are out of town, which we appreciate. How do we proceed with solving this problem without alienating her? — Hungry

Dear Hungry: The next time you invite her over for dinner, simply say, "Oh, by the way, would you please bring an appetizer" (or dessert or side dish). Mention it as though it's the most natural thing in the world. There's no reason for you to feel awkward. It's perfectly appropriate. If you have any hesitations, just imagine if the tables were turned — that you'd been dining at a friend's house for years and then she casually asked you to bring something to dinner that week. Would you feel indignant? No. If anything, you'd perhaps feel embarrassed that she had to ask.

Dear Annie: I lost my wife of 42 and 1/2 years in late 2014. I met her when she was 15, started dating when she was 17, and I married Shirley when she was 20 and I was 21. A friend of 41 years had previously lost his wife and stepped in to assist me in navigating the loss. He had attended a multiweek grief class years before and shared this event.

A petite woman faithfully attended grief classes each week for a long time and never spoke a word to the group.

Finally, at the close of the class, she spoke saying, "I'd like to say something." Everyone stopped talking, almost in disbelief. The room was quiet. She continued: "Profound grief of a spouse is like accidentally and significantly cutting your arm. It hurts really bad and seems that you may never stop the bleeding. But you do. Not too long after, you bump the wound and the scab comes off. It bleeds and hurts for a long time, and then begins to heal again. This process repeats itself over and over for a long time. One day, you look at your arm and see a tender scar that will be part of you for the rest of your life. The scar is there, but it doesn't hurt like when it was a new wound, and the bleeding has stopped."

I've shared this with so many since it was first told to me. It seems to resonate with anyone who knows the loss of a beloved spouse.

Thanks for all you do every day to help so many people you don't even know and will never meet. — Rob R., Jacksonville Beach, Florida

Dear Rob: Your letter brought tears to my eyes. Thank you for passing on this wisdom. I'm so sorry for your loss.
